

The sequence of stories surrounding the collection of a single Mustached Kingfisher in chronological order:

First—Chris Filardi's (the collector) AMNH blog post about finding the bird
<http://www.amnh.org/explore/news-blogs/from-the-field-posts/field-journal-finding-ghosts/>

Second—AMNH blog post is picked up by Audubon Magazine.
<http://www.audubon.org/news/moustached-kingfisher-photographed-first-time>

Unfortunately, comments are no longer visible for the above article!?! See this one instead: <https://www.theguardian.com/science/2015/oct/17/rare-bird-killed-saving-species>

Third—After the volume of comments and reader back-lash from the Audubon article above, Filardi explains why they collected the bird.
<http://www.audubon.org/news/why-i-collected-moustached-kingfisher>

Fourth—After an insane amount of comments, Audubon Magazine takes a stance on this collecting debate in favor of collecting.
<http://www.audubon.org/news/800-comments-and-counting-reasoning-behind-our-kingfisher-posts>

Fifth—Years after collecting the bird, Filardi continues to be harassed. (Hopefully participants can buy pass the NYT paywall).
<https://www.nytimes.com/2018/06/15/opinion/sunday/moustached-kingfisher-internet-harassment.html?action=click&pgtype=Homepage&clickSource=story-heading&module=opinion-c-col-right-region&region=opinion-c-col-right-region&WT.nav=opinion-c-col-right-region>